The triple impact of nursing: better health,
greater gender equality and stronger economies

In September 2015, the nations of the world signed up to the ambitious goal of ensuring that everyone in the world should have access to health care – universal health coverage (UHC) – and that nobody should be left behind.

The Triple Impact Report by the All-Party Parliamentary Group (APPG) on Global Health, makes the point that UHC cannot possibly be achieved without strengthening nursing globally. This is partly about increasing the number of nurses, but also crucially about making sure their contribution is properly understood and enabling them to work to their full potential.

The report argues that strengthening nursing will have the triple impact of improving health, promoting gender equality and supporting economic growth.

Nurses are by far the largest part of the professional health workforce and achieving universal health coverage globally will depend on them being able to use their knowledge and skills to the full. Yet they are too often undervalued and their contribution underestimated.

The triple impact report argues that there is an urgent need globally to raise the profile of nursing and enable nurses to work to their full potential if countries are to achieve universal health coverage. Nursing can and must take the lead on these issues but cannot achieve them without the support of politicians, policy-makers and non-nursing leaders.

ROSELIE MOREY

Education Manager
Lyndoch Living

Roselie has been a Registered Nurse for over 20 years.

Currently, Roselie is the Education Manager at Lyndoch Living. A large component of Roselie's role involves facilitating clinical student placements. Working in the Aged Care industry poses many challenges - in attracting and retaining registered nurses in the industry.

Initially, Roselie worked in the acute field and specialised in orthopaedics, whilst gaining her qualification in Infection Control and Sterilization, through Mayfield Education.

Roselie joined Lyndoch Living in the capacity of a Nurse Unit Manager about 10 years ago. Following seven years in this role she was seconded to her current position as Education Manager.

Roselie has completed her Advanced Diploma of Management, Gray's Management (Audit) Systems, Women & Leadership Australia – Executive Ready, Business Administration and Management and Post Graduate Certificate in HRM, through RMIT.

Roselie has extensive knowledge of the Aged Care industry, the expected growth of the industry, and how this can support and enhance the recognition of nurses and their role within the health framework.
